Bankruptcy near?

Salon closing causes $7,000 customer loss

Second in a series

Like old Mother Hubbard who stole to the cupboard only to find the cabinet bare, Darlene Piazza was shocked to find the California Woman figure salon closed July 9.

She had gone to the studio the night before and was told the Dublin facility would close in two weeks. "I thought I'd start going twice a day, but when I went back the next morning they were carting stuff out and loading it in a truck," she said.

Like all the women interviewed, she thought highly of the program. It was enjoyable and she "felt great" after a session.

In August, 1974, she followed up on an advertisement and got three free treatments, then paid $24 in advance for two weeks of work.

The two-week payments continued until late March when she was told she was close to her goal and would have to pay $50 for a contract to finish off the sessions.

She paid them, but was ill for awhile and unable to participate.

When she did return the night before the closing she noticed everything topsy-turvy at the 7739 Amador Valley Blvd. shop.

Judy, one of the employes, pointed out a notice posted on the board telling of the impending closing. That was two weeks away, however, so Darlene thought she'd go for treatments twice a day to get her money's worth and reach her goal.

The conversation with Judy proved enlightening, but certainly not alarming.

Darlene questioned Judy about a woman Darlene believed was being signed up that night while employes apparently were preparing to close.

The studio would be closed for a few days and open under new owners, Judy reportedly told Darlene. There were problems with the leasor, but they were being worked out.

The contract of the woman signing up that night would be honored by the new owners, Darlene said Judy assured her.

The effervescent Judy also mentioned an unflattering tape recording of a conversation between the owner, Albert R. Rees of San Jose, and the prospective owners. Rees reportedly was none too concerned about the money invested in his firm by his soon to be former clients.

Darlene believes she met Rees the following morning when she returned for her treatments. She described him as gruff, and said he told her he knew nothing about the closing. He was there simply to haul off the equipment.

Ruby Williams also tried to contact Rees. She claims he owes her $200.

She eventually filed a complaint with the State Attorney General's office of Consumer protection and the Alameda County District Attorney's Consumer Fraud Division.

Ruby paid the firm $50 in late May and another $50 on June 26, 1975. She said she later was told the firm would be closing in late July.

In response to her complaint with the state, Rees says in a letter that a decision was made to close the salon in 30 days and that a notice to that effect was posted. All customers were notified, he adds, although the date of the notice and planned closing are not mentioned.

Ruby would like to know why they took her $50 payment when they knew they were closing. Darlene wants to know why they allegedly were signing up a new patron the night before the abrupt shutdown.

Dee Lantz, a former employe at the salon, said she knew the shop would close about July 1 when the lease expired. "When we actually found out the place was closing, no one was signed up for treatments that would run beyond the closing."

The studio closed June 9, however, three weeks early.

She confirmed reports Rees is seriously ill and possibly suffering from cancer, but did not know where the owner could be reached.

According to Alameda County Deputy District Attorney Dick Purdee, fraud can be shown only when money was taken with the knowledge the studio would close before ser-

Agencies tangle on memo

LIVERMORE — Representatives of the Livermore-Amador Valley Water Management Agency and Zone 7 labored Wednesday night to iron out a memo of understanding that has eluded them for more than a year.

LAVWA hoped the zone would agree to the text of a memo passed by LAVWA in November 1974 under which the zone would agree to stay out of the "sewer business" in areas adjacent to the LAVWA service area.

The zone previously had failed twice to pass the memo, chiefly due to the objections of the zone's wastewater committee chairman, Harlan Zodtner.

Zodtner originally had objected to the statement, "Zone 7 does not now intend to enter into the treatment of sewage or disposal of sewage effluent."

Zodtner had argued that this was a course of action open to the zone if no other course were available to protect the quality of the underground water basin.

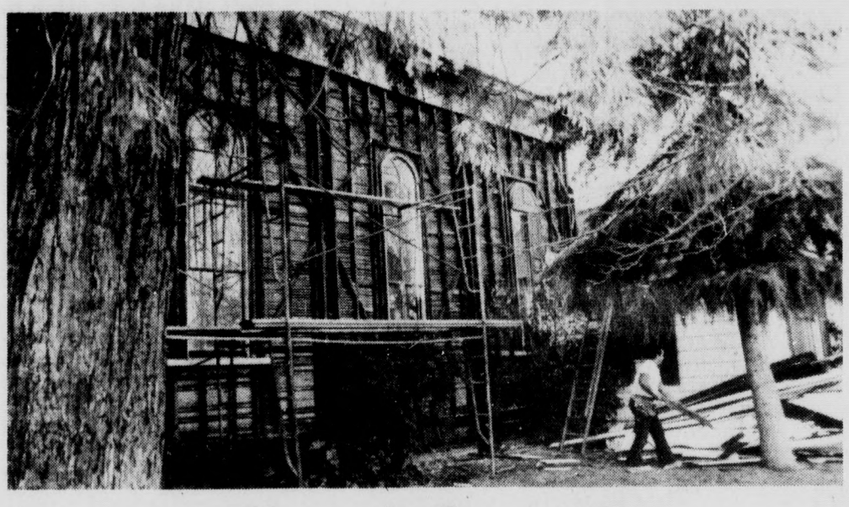
Don Miller, LAVWA representative from Livermore, said the word "now" was critical to the sentence because it did not preclude the zone's consideration of sewage treatment at some later time.

But director Zodtner was not present for the Wednesday meeting, so the matter was deferred until the next joint committee meeting.

LAVWA did propose amendments to the original memo. Upon the advice of the Valley Community Services District's legal counsel, LAVWA backed off its previous stand to provide for treatment and disposal of all urban wastewater.

The wording was altered to read, "It is the intent of LAVWA to consider providing treatment and disposal of all urban wastewater."

The two agencies are required by the Bay Area Sewer Services Agency to "develop arrangements for mutually satisfactory wastewater management" on lands adjacent to the LAVWA service area.



Church facelift

Workman remove redwood siding from the Presbyterian Community Church at 10 Neal St. in Pleasanton so fiberglas insulation and structural support can be applied prior to its planned move to Mirador Drive in July. Plywood siding and tarpaper will be placed over the insulation before the redwood boards are put back in place. Donations to the moving fund can be sent to the church office, 100 Neal St., Pleasanton, 94566.

Zone 7 tax rate unchanged

LIVERMORE — Zone 7's $6 million budget for fiscal year 1976-77 will hold the tax rate at 35 cents per $100 assessed valuation, the same as last year's rate.

The board of directors of Zone 7 of the Alameda County Flood Control and Water Conservation District Wednesday night approved the budget, sending it on its way through county review channels.

Zone finance committee director Robert Becker called the budget "sound and responsible." He noted there were no provisions for deficit spending, and said it afforded directors "a great deal of flexibility."

The budget passed unanimously, 5 to 0. Directors Joseph Concannon and George Lydiksen were absent. Lydiksen, a member of the finance committee, had reviewed the budget earlier and indicated his approval.

Director Robert Pearson said he cast his affirmative vote with reservations.

"I could have gone either way on this vote. There's too much money being accumulated by water users in the valley," said Pearson. "If this continues, I will vote against the budget next year."

Pearson has opposed the board's connection fee rate-setting policy. He argued that capital improvements to the expansion of the system should be paid for by new connectors.

He said the water sales fund "still accrues monies faster than the connection fees are estimated to bring in."

Pearson said he wanted to note for the record, "Water users have paid for facilities in the past, and they will continue to pay for future facilities, the way the budget is set up."

Jordan blasts council

PLEASANTON - Council candidate Jim Jordan criticized the city administration and council incumbents for an alleged lack of action on the Las Positas overcrossing Wednesday.

In a press release to The Times, Jordan said, "The present city administration and council incumbents have had a long time to get things moving on the West Las Positas overcrossing, but the leaderless city council and unguided administration have chosen to use their time lobbying for costly redevelopment schemes to pay for it rather than lobbyinq in Sacramento at Cal Trans which promised to finance the project," said Jordan.

"This can't keep coming up every two years as a motherhood and apple pie campaign issue. It can't keep bouncing from number one priority to number five. There must be some action now. We need new leaders to get the ball rolling to get the crossing in," he said.

The city administration has a joint venture agreement with a regional center developer to build the Stoneridge overcrossing which Jordan contends is not needed. But the city staff "won't even take a field trip to Sacramento to lobby for the West Las Positas overcrossing," said Jordan.

The administration "tried to convince the people that the (Las positas) overcrossing would go in immediately after redevelopment was approved. The real fact is that the overcrossing, as the number five priority in redevelopment, would have taken more than seven years to finance and construct," said Jordan.

"That is subterfuge, stalling and a sham and it can't be overlooked now that West Las Positas has become a popular campaign topic," he said.

Citizens Against Redevelopment, of which Jordan is vice-chairman, studied the overcrossing issue six months ago and was vocal about it all along, said Jordan. "My neighbor are tired of hearing about the Las Positas overcrossing only at election time. They want some action. I'll get the ball rolling," said Jordan.

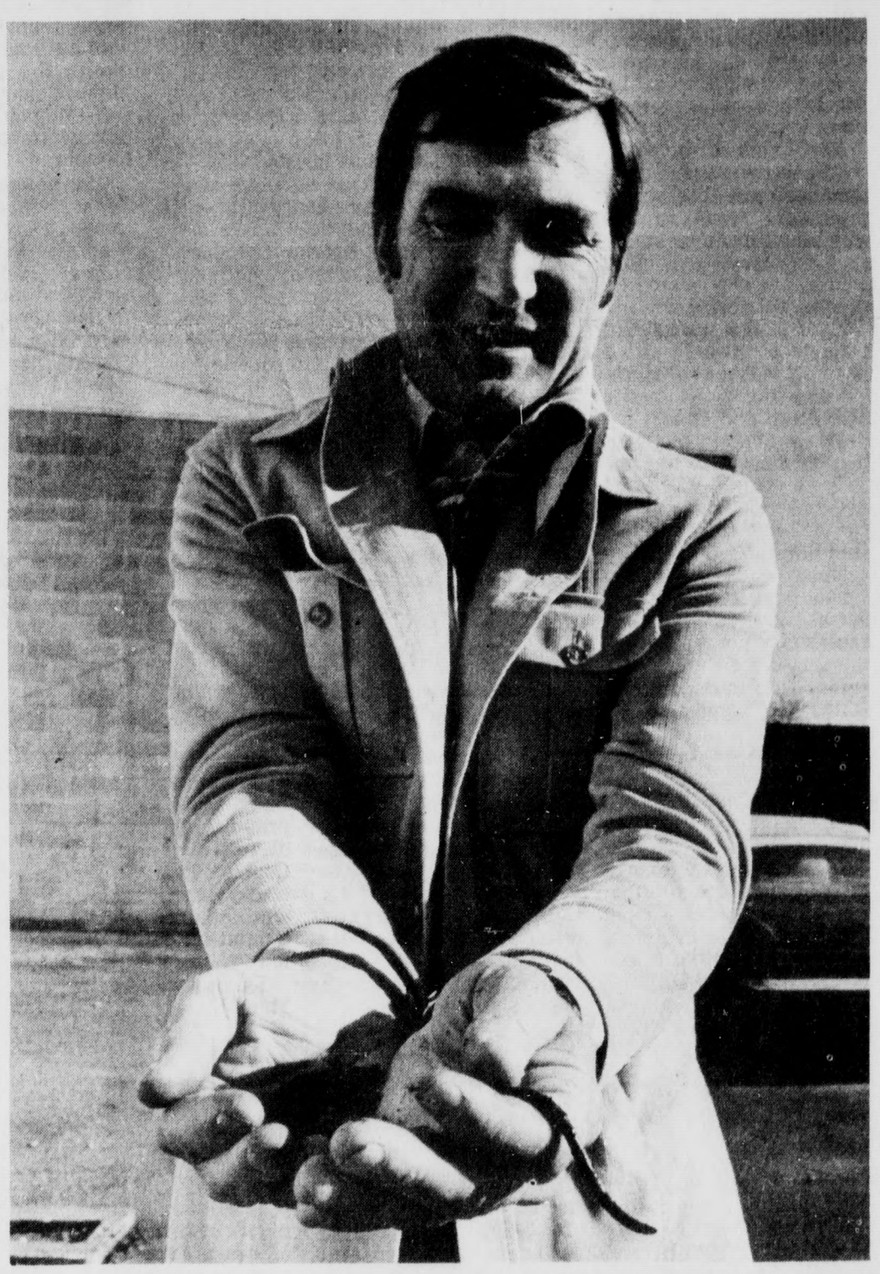
School to stay on Alisal?

A group of concerned members of the Alisal Improvement Club met with Dan Johnson, Alameda County Director of Special Educaton, in the home of the Dan Connors, who live directly across the way from the Assembly of God Church on Alisal Street in Pleasnton. The Church is currently being used as a school for the severely handicapped during the week.

According to the homeowners, they have repeatedly met with frustrated attempts to speak with Superintendent of Schools, Rock La Fleche, to question the advisability of having a school in an area of homes which has already undergone serious sewage and water contamination problems. A school with 20 children and 4 adults taxes the already waning water supply of the 137 families surrounding the school, state the homeowners.

They also feel the added burden of a heavier than normal traffic flow on a two-lane country road. In addition to the large transport buses for church use on Sundays and Wednesday evenings, they now have school busses, sewage disposal trucks and water trucks making regular runs. The school, it seems, has no water supply and reportedly has been buying their water from a neighbor next to the school.

According to the homeowners' representatives all the neighboring residents bordering the school received a letter from the Alameda County Environmental Services in 1973 declaring that the well water was unsafe for human consumption and advised all those living in the area against its usage for drinking purposes.



The Squirm

Super Worm is the name of the wriggling monster pictured above trying to escape from the grasp of John Lavery of Worms International. Juvenile crime plan sent to legislature

The Alameda County Grand Jury has forwarded emergency legislation to the California Legislature that deals with the youthful violent offender and calls for superior court judges to preside in all cases involving crimes of violence committed by persons aged 16 and 17 years.

Prepared by the Alameda County district attorney's office, the proposal was endorsed on an 8-1 vote earlier in the week by the Oakland City Council.

George Nicholson, senior trial deputy district attorney, and a resident of Dublin, said the bill "has nothing to do with substantive law. It is basically procedural."

In his presentation before the city council, Nicholson referred to numerous cases in the metropolitan areas of Alameda County where juvenile gangs broke into homes of elderly residents and beat, tortured or killed the occupants.

Also noted was the Assembly Criminal Justice Committee's performance in regard criminal justice bills over the last three years Nicholson said the committee headed by Assemblyman Alan Sieroty, D-Beverly Hills, had killed 54 such bills previously passed by the Senate.

The County Grand Jury, in passing the resolution urging passage of The Youthful Violent Offender Act, said "no comment or criticism of actions by any judge, juvenile court referee, the County Probation Department, or any other individual or local government agency is intended by the resolution's adoption. The resolution is a recognition of flaws in the criminal justice system, and contains our stated belief that The Youthful Violent Offender Act will help rectify those flaws."

The cover release with a copy of the proposed legislation also said "the need for such reform has been demonstrated by an extended wave of senseless violence directed at innocent citizens, primarily the elderly and retired, by gangs of youths, and the failure of the criminal justice system to deal with it.

Nicholson said he once asked the Oakland Police Department to give him some statistics on violent crimes committed against elderly people but was told he was asking for the impossible — there were just too many such crimes.

In addition to the provision calling for superior court judges to preside in all cases involving crimes of violence (committed by persons aged 16 and 17), the proposed legislation asks that "secrecy which cloaks juvenile courts from public scrutiny in such cases will be removed, and district attorneys would be required to prosecute cases in juvenile court which involve violent crime. Currently, probation departments act as prosecutor and custodian of those prosecuted in such cases which involves a potential conflict of interest."

A fourth provision would amend a section of the California Penal Code. The section (1202b) is a device now used to mitigate the punishment of hundreds of violent criminals every year, according to the Grand Jury statement. "In some cases this has meant that first degree murderers are possibly made eligible for parole in six months."

Finally, if passed, the act would require public records be kept and reasons stated for actions which involve violent, though youthful offenders and do likewise for all persons, of whatever age, convicted of such crimes.

The act provides for original jurisdiction in adult court for persons 16 and 17 years of age charged with the commission or attempt to commit any one or more of the following:

Murder, arson, rape, robbery, kidnapping, grand theft person, felony assault, residential burglary, mayhem, felony child molestation, possession or use of any explosive device, or any felony in which one or more of the victims is 60 years of age or older, or any felony charged in connection with allegations of personal arming with a deadly weapon, use of a firearm, or wilful infliction of great bodily injury.

The proposed bill also asks that any 16 or 17 year old certified to juvenile court have "proceedings thereafter public, prosecuted prosecuted by the district attorney on behalf of the people, presided over by a sworn superior court judge and with no referee to hear such proceedings."

Allen terms Clark expenses 'outrageous'

By RICK VOGT
Lesher News Bureau

Expenses of rapid transit director Richard Clark for November were "outrageous," a fellow director charged Thursday.

Robert Allen, Bay Area Rapid Transit director from Livermore, contended that Clark hasn't cut down on outside clerical help, despite a board of directors' edict tightening of expense account procedures.

Both Clark and board president Elmer Cooper of San Francisco are under investigation for alleged expense account improprieties by the Contra Costa and Alameda County grand juries.

An effort by Lesher Newspapers to examine the November expenses of other board members for comparison with Clark's $495 claim was fruitless because the Alameda County Grand Jury is currently looking at those documents.

At Thursday's meeting, Allen waved a copy of Clark's expense account and declared, "This is outrageous."

Allen declared that Clark's expense account, part of which was reimbursement for $300 worth of "clerical services," telephone calls, office space and postage, was "an outrageous condition that is being carried forth."

The remainder of the Clark expense reimbursements included an additional $52 for telephone calls and a telephone answering service, a $39 hotel bill, $22 mileage reimbursement, and $40 per diem payment (all for a labor-management seminar in Santa Cruz) an additional $27 for mileage and $11 for meals on days that the BART board met.

Clark, agitated at being asked about why he used outside clerical help, declared he needs extra help "because I cannot be down here (at BART) all-day long sorting my mail, filing information, answering letters, communicating with people on the phone and interviewing people."

He also contended that BART staff members often cannot answer questions and therefor refer them to Clark at his office or home.

"All my expenses conform in detail to the rules of the board," Clark asserted.

As for an answering service, Clark contends he wouldn't have one "unless I was on BART."

A breakdown of Clark's expenses show that he hired Johan M. Klehs of San Leandro for $200 per month to perform "BART clerical organization, transportation research, secretarial-administrative duties and community relations."

Another $100 was spent for rental of office space, telephone, clerical help, telephone and postage from an Oakland real estate company.

Parents petition for guard

PLEASANTON — Parents of children at Walnut Grove School are mounting a petition campaign to lobby the city council for a crossing guard at the intersection of Black Avenue and Harvest Road.

The drive's leaders, who began circulating the petitions yesterday, will attend the city council meeting Monday where the item is expected to be discussed.

Connie Roney and Sandy Smith are the residents spearheading the petition drive. They would welcome interested parties to call them at 846-4347 or 846-8575 for more information about the issue or the petition.

Roney told The Times that she met yesterday with Walnut Grove principal Principal Tony Huff and the officers of the parent-teachers association. The PTA board pledged a letter of support to the city to be sent to the city council, said Roney.

Huff has supported the alleged need for crossing guards by instructing Walnut Grove kindergarten teachers to assist afternoon students who must travel home via the Black-Harvest intersection.

Ken Lamb of the city's traffic engineering department believes that strong reminders from parents will insure a child's safety at street crosssings more than a crossing guard or mechanical device.

Lamb a few weeks ago discussed state-establishsd criteria for crossing guard needs nd concluded that the Black-Harvest intersection does not need guards. Only a seventh of school age children accidents occur to and from school, said Lamb.

Ninety-eight percent of schoolchild accidents occur at locations other than crosswalks, but the first thing to come to mind for safety is to control crosswalks, said Lamb.

At least one council member is in favor of crossing guards at the intersection. Councilwoman Joyce LeClaire announced her support at the council meeting a few weeks ago after Lamb's presentation. Enough money remains in the city's redevelopment fund to pay for the crossing guard, said LeClaire.

Lawyers asked choice

The state bar association's board of governors has polled attorneys and judges in the valley and Alameda County about the merits of four possible candidates for the vacancy created by Judge William Gale's retirement.

Reliable sources indicated yesterday that David Harris, Mark Eaton, Jack Noonan and Joseph Schwab have been screened by their fellow jurists.

The recommendations have been returned to the state bar's board of governors, but they have not been forwarded yet to Governor Jerry Brown. The governor is expected to make an appointment soon.

Valley attorneys and Alameda County judges were asked to rate the candidates as to their temperament, knowledge, integrity and ability. The board of governors will review these evaluation forms and come up with their own overall ratings of each candidate. The categories of rating used by the state board includes extremely well qualified, well qualified, qualified, unqualified, and unknown (if the candidate is unknown to the board).

Questionnaires going to the local lawyers have a place for general comments about the candidate including his "known character traits or other factors reflecting on the person's ability to be a fair and impartial judge," said the reliable source.

Questionnaires sent to the candidates themselves are also probing, said the source. They ask such things as the most prominent court actions taken and how the cases were disposed, and questions about community involvement.

Once Governor Brown has the information from the state bar's board of governors, he "probably will appoint a judge in 30 seconds," said the source in apparent reference to Brown's reputation for making quick decisions after getting all possible facts.

'Good Times' coming!

PLEASANTON — Yes, fans, there'll be another "Good Times" parade in this community — and apparently just a few weeks before the venerable Fair parade now tentatively set for Sunday, June 27.

At a meeting Thursday afternoon, representatives of the Pleasanton Chamber of Commerce, Bicentennial Festival Committee and Jaycees discussed possible dates for the Radio KNBR - backed parade which was first held in 1974.

Ben Fernandez told the group that a meeting with KNBR people had brought forth a mutually - acceptable date of Sunday, May 16.

However, Billie Schmer of the Pleasanton Art League and Bicentennial group said this would be in direct conflict with the Country Fair, an arts and crafts extravaganza that will include many Bicentennial-related events on May 15-16.

Fernandez and Ted Mann said KNBR public relations people could not change the date to a September or October date.

Discussion then revolved around holding the "Good Times" parade, a highly-popular event that has taken some of the play away from the established and more traditional Fair parade, on either May 2 or May 23.

Also to be decided is where, and in what fashion, the parade will disband as the Fairgrounds will not be available.

While the "Good Times" parade is being organized by KNBR and chamber people, the June 27 event will be under the auspices of the Pleasanton Bicentennial Festival Committee in association with the chamber, Jaycees and City of Pleasanton.

vices could be rendered.

Of the dozen or so women contacted by The Times, most claim they should get back about $150. Some demand as little as $56, while others want as much as $200.

An analysis by women close to the studio estimates the figure at a total of $7,000.

But for every woman reached there apparently are several others who invested in the figure treatments, but are afraid to speak out for fear of looking foolish.

Some didn't tell their husbands in the first place and now fear double incrimination. Rees' attorney, John Paul Marlais of San Jose, said bankruptcy papers will be filed "within a month or so." While he has represented the firm in the past, he does not know if he will be the attorney of record for the bankruptcy filing.

Rees keeps sporadic office hours and could not be contacted. He reportedly lives above the R&T Paint Co. 1615 Terminal Ave., San Jose. An interest in a ship salvage firm in Greece sends him on trips to the Mediterranean.

Tomorrow: Rees' attempts to get out of the business.

Santa Rita escapees spark valley search

SANTA RITA — An intensive search by ground and air was on last night for two escaped prisoners of Santa Rita Rehabilitation Center's maximum security section, the first successful break from this area in five years.

Gary Thatcher, 20, being held for auto theft and a previous escape from custody, and Richard Lyons, 30, being held for armed robbery, pried open a screen to escape from the facility during mealtime, about 6:15 p.m. Both are considered dangerous but authorities did not know whether they were armed.

The Alameda County Sheriff Department deputies were joined by other law enforcement officers from the valley and a helicopter is conducting a search for the pair.

Murray candidates agree

Increased talks needed

Though they came at it from different directions, all six candidates for the Murray School District board opening believe better communications are necessary between board members, the respective school staffs and the public.

The aspect of greater openness was keynoted by Eugene Hinton, a previous candidate for the board, who also moved into such controversial areas as personnel review boards, greater selectivity as regards text books and accountability of school boards.

Linda Jeffery, a dress designer and officer in a statewide police officers wives association, also stressed comunications and the need for a board member to be responsive to wishes of the taxpayers.

She also said an additional goal was to bring fiscal responsibility to the board.

Harrietta Dahlin, a resident of Dublin 4½ years, felt her experience with various school groups such as the Nielsen PTA, Amador Valley Scholarship Board and Dublin High Parents Club, would be a plus in her quest for the seat vacated by Joanne Bascom.

Dr. Harry Overline, who directed a major learning disability center near Detroit, Michigan prior to accepting a faculty post at Cal State Hayward, said school districts will be reshuffling their priorities over the next few years.

He stressed parental choice in determining what type of education a child should have — stress on the three 'Rs with strict discipline or open, non - graded classes.

"Grade levels are purely arbitrary. We've got to look at where children are — to look at performance rather than chronological age."

Art Laursen, a board member for six years, loosened the rather rigid atmosphere with his explanation of why he decided not to run for reelection last year — and why he has since changed his mind to seek a board seat at the March 2 election.

He noted that illness and new job duties at the time caused him to make the decision.

Laursen said he was most interested in the subject of collective bargaining and likened the reaction of some by joking, "It's like they (employees) were going to attack the castle."

Laursen also commented that voting for school bonds was a "safe investment."

Dawn Rutter also focused on communications and the handling of power by elected officials.

A member of the Longshoremen's auxiliary and Charles Auer VFW auxiliary, Mrs. Rutter has the distinction of being named a lifetime PTA member through her work with the Fallon PTA.

Finch wants overpass

PLEASANTON — The Las Positas overpass is not a new issue with city council candidate Gene Finch, according to a press release submitted to The Times Wednesday.

"I had the foresight to insist two years ago when I was a candidate for city councilman that it was imperative that we have it," said Finch. "There is no question in my mind that it will tie our city together, provide needed tax revenue for Pleasanton and save time, energy and money that is used now because it does not exist."

"I mentioned it then and now, not as a campaign issue alone, but as a genuine need which exists."

"Likewise, our sewer facility problems must be met in order to attract non-polluting light industry and commercial retail outlets to Pleasanton. This will provide jobs as well as alleviate the tax burden of the homeowner," said Finch.

The present city council and staff have looked at the city's motto — "The City of Planned Progress" — and given all their attention "to planning and little attention to progress," said Finch. "I assure you that when I am elected to the city council, I will attempt to remove and correct any such stigma which now exists."

As a councilman, Finch said he would "press for credibility at city hall ... and for adequate fire protection, greater cooperation among all city officials, access to the whole city by all city residents ... and proper sewer facilities to meet the needs of our city as outlined in the general plan. Most of all, I will be a councilman with sound business judgment and will have the interests of the our city at heart."

The ceremonies are set at Valley View School in Pleasanton at 7 p.m. Others to serve with Lisa include Cindy Woodruff, worthy associate advisor; Terri Piper, charity; Diane Seed, hope; Diane Look, faith. Rainbow Girls is a Masonic youth group of young women between the ages of 12 and 20 years. Adult advisor of the Pleasanton group is Marilyn Barnhill.

Parents Without Partners

Six different types of smokers will be identified by Dwight Sterling who will approach the question of why people smoke at the Jan. 28 meeting of Parents Without Partners.

The group convenes at 7:30 p.m. at the Livermore Library.

Sterling, director of a smoking clinic for the Alameda County Health Department, will outline new methods to help the smoker quit, cut down or simply enjoy smoking without guilt.

Membership in PWP is open to any single parent, with custody of a child not required. Newcomers orientation meetings are held every week. For more information contact Connie at 443-1733, Andy at 443-3061 or the PWP answering service at 443-0802.

Xi Xi Psi

Mrs. Robert Elliott of Pleasanton will host the Jan. 28 meeting of the Xi Xi Psi Exemplar Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi.

Co-hostess for the 8 p.m. gathering will be Mrs. Curt Boespflug. Mrs. Richard Glieden will present the program "The Pendulum Swings."

The chapter will plan the upcoming Sweetheart Ball which will honor the chapter's sweetheart, Mrs. Leon Jones.

V.I.P.'s

Juniors and seniors from Pleasanton's Amador High School will entertain the Pleasanton V.I.P.'s Club Monday, Jan. 26 at the Veterans Memorial Building.

Paul Loretz will present the program "I Remember When."

Members will enjoy salads, crackers, tea and coffee to be provided by the club for the noon luncheon. Membership cards for 1976 will be available at $1 for all Pleasanton senior citizens.

PWC

A scholarship card party will be hosted by the Pleasanton Women's Club Thursday, Jan. 29 at the clubhouse, 4133 Regalia Ave.

Play continues until 4 p.m. following a noon luncheon. Proceeds will fill the Amador Valley Scholarship Fund coffers.

Tickets for the party are $2.50 per person available through Evaline Ward at 846-4994 or Margaret Scruugs at 846-6618.

Creative living

A class exploring Seth's techniques for finding more creativity and enjoyment in daily life will be taught by Lynn Bieber beginning Monday, Jan. 26 at 1814 Catalina Ct., Livermore.

Cost of the class is $10 per session. For more information call 443-1818.

Seniors

For those with an aging parent or parents, the Responsible Relative Law was terminated Jan. 1, 1976. Persons 60 years of age or over may now be eligible for supplemental income as a result.

The Senior Service Center at H and Eighth Streets in Livermore is open to help these persons apply for extra income through Social Security, especially those with high medical expenses. All personal information is handled in strict confidence by the center.

For an appointment, senior citizens may contact Lillian Snorf at 443-1150.

Easter Seal

The need of the severely-physically disabled to return to the mainstream of community life is being met by the Alameda County Easter Seal Rehabilitation Center with a new state-funded program known as "MEDI-VOC."

A grant of nearly $70,000 was made to the center by the State of California that was matched by $7,698 from the county Easter Seal unit.

Physically disabled adults seeking employment are encouraged to contact Joyce Wonder at the MEDI-VOC office at 835-2131. Among those eligible for help are amputees, stroke, multiple sclerosis or arthritis victims.

The staff at the center work cooperatively with the state Department of Rehabilitation, Goodwill Industries, and the Mt. Diablo Rehabilitation facilities.

Legal hokum and palmistry

It is tough enough trying to sustain some kind of "suburban standard" against the onslaught of regional and inner-city pressures. That struggle becomes damned near impossible when your own city attorney finds reason to rule in favor of a palmist, and against all local logic.

The case in point came out of Pleasanton; but the city attorney's finding could open the Valley's gates to all kinds of hocus pocus, card flipping, ball reading and the like. Those characters would just love to find some nice little town on the Bay's fringe, willing to offer them a legal haven. Now they may have such a welcome, thanks to that Pleasanton "ruling."

As with most East Bay cities, Pleasanton has an ordinance which lets soothsayers and tricksters know they are not welcome here. One of the points in that code is "shall not accept compensation" for those services.

One clever fellow came to Pleasanton with a proposal that would allow him to offer palmistry as a "side line" to his other business ventures. He would not "charge" for that service, but simply accept "donations."

"Can't see any problem there," rules City Attorney Kenneth Scheidig. Scheidig apparently did considerable research on "free speech" and a lot of other law school slight-of-hand in arriving at his decision. What he failed to study was the mood and the need of the community he is paid to serve.

All of which gets us back to an earlier point raised by this newspaper on the trend whereby our Valley communities build large legal staffs — not to advance the local cause as the people see it, but to guide the governing body into judicial legerdemain and on to the highest courts available ... all in pursuit of a great new precedent-setting victory, and to hell with the cost.

What we are developing is a second branch of local government. The city attorney (or whatever the title) is not elected by or responsive to the people, or even to the city manager. He reports directly to the council, and doesn't even have to do that ... judging by this latest "palmistry versus free speech" nonsense.

The people who struggle to preserve a home-town standard — from clean air to better schools — don't need a third branch of government that views us from some law school plateau. What we do need is a legal servant to advance and defend the community will first, and then let the outsider who would change that standard sue us, if he must, in order to break our laws.

That did not happen in the Pleasanton palmistry case, and that could mean bads news for the entire Valley.

Murphy and us

In their eagerness to print some interesting comment on the candidacy of one John Murphy, supervisor for Alameda County's First District, other news media are apt to report on the current "Murphy stance" of this one newspaper.

The Times is either "disenchanted" with Supervisor Murphy or we are "sticking by him regardless" or we are simply "adopting a wait and see policy" in the whole supervisorial race.

Perhaps it is a form of flattery that other editors would bother their heads about this newspaper's position ... even well before we have taken any position. But frankly, we would prefer they stick to their endorsement processes, and leave us to ours.

Our peers and our readers are generally agreed that "you can always tell where The Times stands on the major issues." That has been our policy, and we see no reason to change with the First Supervisorial race, or any of the other election tests in this busy Bicentennial year.

As observed here before, The Times is the only newspaper that has consistently endorsed Murphy's candidacy throughout his 16 years of public service, a position that has just as consistently been shared by the voters. But no one (least of all the pragmatic Mr. Murphy) is going to assume the First District electorate is once again a cinch to return that incumbent to office, any more than they can assume The Times will once again endorse the Murphy candidacy.

We are observing the candidates, just as you are. When we make our endorsement you will be the first to know. And when the voters make their final decision, everyone will know. But until that time, other editors will simply have to find something else to tell their readers.

Those skateboards

Monday afternoon two small boys sat on skateboards in the exact center of Olympia Fields Drive at its intersection with Alcosta Boulevard in San Ramon, their legs extended and locked so they formed jointly a sled on wheels.

Having assumed their desired position they proceded to roll down the sloping, curving street toward Cherry Hills Lane and level pavement where they eventually stopped near the curb.

Unfortunately not everyone who travels along that street is familiar with its extra curricular use nor do they slow down to the pace residents of the area know is necessary.

One such automobile, its driver occupied by oncoming traffic and view slightly blocked by a row of olive trees in Alcosta's center island, could easily have turned at a legitimate speed to Olympia Fields, not seen the boys with their low profile, hit and injured, even killed them.

Fortunately that has not happened.

American ingenuity sometimes seems dedicated to helping people commit suicide. Fireworks, firearms, motor vehicles and matches do a pretty good job of that.

Let's not add skateboards to the list. Some parents were negligent on Olympia Fields Drive Monday. They could pay for that carelessness with a child's life.

Hindsight/Foresight

ECE as a reform

Is the Early Childhood Education concept the prime way to restructure the way we operate our elementary schools?

ECE mandates individualized instruction for primary (K-3) age students. And it requires planning by parents, administrators and teachers at each school.

Three valley school districts each have three schools involved in Early Childhood Education and a fourth, Pleasanton, has one.

ECE is state schools chief Wilson Riles' baby and he's made sure the media learns all the positive and up-to-the-moment data on its accomplishments.

Part of ECE program procedure calls for evaluation, not only at the school and district levels but by review teams sent out by the state.

Cronin and Frederiksen, in the Murray district, will have their ECE programs reviewed Tuesday by a two-man team from the State Department of Education's Office of Program Evaluation. Cronin is an "expansion" school (in its first year in the ECE program) while Frederiksen is offering ECE for the second year.

Dublin School has been in the program from the outset, following the writing of n ECE procedure by former assistant superintendent Bill Crozier.

The Pleasanton district's ECE program, based since its inception at Fairlands School, was the subject of discussion at Wednesday night's Amador-Pleasanton School Community Council meeting.

Gene Vargas, principal at the school, was instrumental in launching the program and, along with teaching vice principal Kay Bolles, has apparently maintained a high quality program that has drawn considerable praise and parent involvement.

Neil Armstrong School in San Ramon is the "oldtimer" in the San Ramon Valley Unified School District's ECE instruction. Green Valley and Twin Creeks are each in their second year.

Dr. James Smith, assistant superintendent for instruction, is responsible for the program's success and possible expansion in the San Ramon district.

Jack Waggoner, director of elementary education, is in charge of ECE for Livermore's Marylin Avenue, Arroyo Mocho and Portola schools.

How well children do on tests and/or the results of evaluations pretty well determine if more schools in a particular district become part of ECE.

Riles is quick to counter that "ECE is not concerned exclusively with test scores. It is a fundamental, permanent, restructuring of the way we operate our elementary schools. Parents, administrators and teachers at each school must be involved in planning with individualized instruction as the end result. These are transcendent changes in California schools that will be of benefit to children long after this year's excellent test results are forgotten."

The evaluation report out of Riles' office says 180,932 parents participated in the reform effort in 1,166 ECE schools during 1974-75. That is an increase of 54 per cent over parent participation for 1973-74.

The report summarized: The California state assessment testing showed that students in the ECE process achieved significantly higher, statistically, than did matched groups of students not in the program.

So to come back to the original question— Is ECE the prime way to restructure the way we operate our elementary schools? Well, apparently it is. In our travels around the "education beat" we have yet to hear any complaints or disgruntled feelings from parent, teacher or administrator.

What comments we have heard from each of the above have all been favorable.

Our only negative reaction would be to the procedure by which schools "qualify" to be added to ECE.

Letters to The Times

VMH election

Editor, The Times:

The issues in the coming Valley Memorial Hospital election seem quite clear.

Originally the contributors in both fund raising campaigns understood the construction and later expansion was to provide better services for the Valley at a lower cost as the debt was reduced and later retired.

As a contributor and one who worked energetically for both fund raising events, it was my understanding we would have reduced costs rather than have sharp increases (inflation considered).

Where did the funds originate to purchase an additional site? Why were the contributors (stockholders) not given a voice in this choice?

If nothing else comes from this campaign, it has forced the Board and Administration to realize this is not a dictatorship — rather a country where the people may voice their concern (and vote).

To build a new hospital, let us have another drive to include more of the new people and not place the burden upon the present facilities.

Graham Nissen, a contributor
Livermore

VMH candidate

Editor, The Times:

It is a fact that on occasion the hospital is reaching a level of occupancy that causes over crowding problems. It will grow more severe as time goes on. This condition can be alleviated in two ways. One, by restricting the number of people admitted to Valley Memorial. The other is to expand the health care facilities.

Although people tell you that expansion of Valley Memorial will be growth inducing or will help to promote an increased in the population of the valley, that isn't so. In the case of Valley Memorial, the growth is being generated by the existing residents in the valley, not by any new ones.

The population in this valley is relatively young, both in age and in the number of years that the average resident has lived here. As a community changes from one of relatively young population to an older one, it requires more medical care facilities. This is the case in the valley.

At this time only about 40% of the residents of the valley use the hospital services of Valley Memorial. Approximately 20% use Kaiser. The other 40% go to hospitals outside the valley.

This situation is now begining to change. One indication is the increased use of Valley Memorial by the people now serviced by its Family Health Center in Dublin. A facility that is just starting to have a significant impact. Also, as more of the people here begin to seek medical services in the valley, more doctors will locate here. They will then add to the medical load of Valley Memorial.

Therefore, without any additions to the present population, Valley Memorial will have to expand to meet this growing need.

At this time and as a candidate for the Hospital Board, I can assure you that I will put the need for health care of the patient as my prime concern and at as low a cost as is commensurate with a high level of care.

Yule baskets

Editor, The Times:

Thank you for the excellent coverage you gave our annual Christmas Basket Project.

The Center provided a turkey, canned goods, and staples for 287 families. The "basket" also included toys for the children and gift certificates for the teens.

The response from the community to our pleas for cash and donations of toys and good was tremendous! Donors represented all segments of the community: young people from kindergarten to high school, church groups, social and civic organizations, businesses, and individuals. Clearly, the public is not indifferent to the needs of those who for various and particular reasons cannot obtain their basic needs.

May we take this opportunity to thank Barbara Musselman, chairperson of the project. She and her committee worked hard and many hours coordinating the venture. Special thanks also to the volunteer workers who assisted her and to the First Presbyterian Church for the use of the Fellowship Hall as the distribution center.

Christmas donations do more than pay for Christmas basket expenses. They enable us to stock our shelves and replenish our operating funds. Needs continue beyond the Christmas season.

On behalf of the families and individuals whom we serve, we thank all who contribute in any way to the Center throughout the year and hope for their continued support.

round the town

A literary acquaintance of mine — whose name now escapes me — was known to remark "All I know is what I read in the newspapers." If he had been keeping up the daily news of late, then my friend would be a mighty sad fellow.

In a week that brought us Gerald Ford's State of the Union message, Jack Kennedy's latest sexual conquests, and a report that somebody wants to turn the Loch Ness Monster's hideout into a full-time tv studio, we were also informed that "The Western Is Dead!"

Some smarty on Reuters staff came up with that conclusion after scanning the week's tv listings, sizing up Hollywood's Top Ten, and checking to see if any radio net is still carrying the Lone Ranger."

The conclusion by Reuters is that John Wayne is at the end of his trail, Tom Mix's portrait no longer hangs in the emergency room at Hollywood Hospital, Rin Tin Tin has lost his bite.

The straightforward, six-gun approach to life that got the world through the Great Depression, is now too simple for today's complicated global tenants. We prefer to be psyched out, rather than shot at. Exorcised, not entertained. Sex has replaced the six gun as the big stick in life.

Seems to me we're making a poor swap. Not that I figure Buck Jones and Hopalong Cassidy had all the answers. They didn't. And that's just the point. They knew it, I knew it. Even my poor mother who had to find ten cents every Saturday to get me into the Royal Theater knew it.

All that Buck and Hopalong and Tim and Roy did for me and my generation was to free us from the bondage of poverty. The hopelessness of crops that wouldn't grow, rain that never came, the meal sometimes missed.

"How was it, growing up in such poor times?" a younger acquaintance recently asked. And I replied — "I never knew we were poor. My parents never told me."

And that is the conspiracy which the great western heroes of the 30's and early 40's sustained. And they did it with such verve.

It has been recorded that Tom Mix broke every bone in his body, some of 'em several times, throughout his movie career. No make-believe cowboy, not our Tom. When he fell from that horse, real bruises resulted. When he plunged into the icy river, he emerged with a genuine cold. And us kids all suffered and sneezed with him.

Our hero deliverers were for real. No "Moonies" we. We were captivated by leaders who fell down and rolled in the dirt and got back up again to vanquish the enemy, right the wrong.

And we went home convinced that each one of us could mount up and ride into a better tomorrow.

Show me a youngster who gets that kind of message from today's tv faire, or the latest screen flick. Today a youngster leaves the tv screen convinced that success is a multi-million dollar football contract. He goes to the movies to learn the latest on karate, the fast knife, the clever connection.

Oh sure, they're all imitation . . Ken Maynard and Richard Burton, Hoot Gibson and Robert Redford. Only our guys didn't do their thing in an air-conditioned trailer, while some trick artist took the big fall.

Those were real bones Tom Mix busted, his real bones. Ken Maynard was one of the finest horsemen around. Will Rogers chased steers around half this globe before he ever stood on a stage, or cashed a big check.

And Will Rogers sharpened his humor on the day's news. He was always able to find something in the daily paper to make us laugh, in a world that had known a generation of misery.

Will isn't around to read about the passing of the cowboy. Good thing. My generation was raised to believe that real heroes never cried.

Lighter Times

Every Feb. 2 the nation celebrates Ground Hog Day. But the lowly groundhog is seen only as a weather prophet on his day. The truth is that the groundhog is a much more valuable rodent than we may ever suspect.

I have been ruminating on the possibilities of how America can get the most out of his or her groundhogs, and I see a few ideas for us on the local scene.

The groundhogs dig holes well. A subtle city staff would employ them to dig holes under old, unwanted buildings so they will fall over, thus necessitating a redevelopment project downtown.

Groundhogs could dig many holes in the country-side and smog could be pumped into these daily, providing a cleaner, healthier environment for us all.

There is a role for the noble groundhog in Dublin, too. St. Patrick's Day is a big celebration in the community, quite naturally. But the celebration has never had those little green men known as leprechauns. Groundhogs, dyed green and dressed in the proper attire, could fool the most discerning audience at 20 paces.

In recognition of this noble animal, the United Nations could declare International Ground Hog Day on Feb. 2.

Sound and Fury

Walt Hecox

Armagedden may not be here, my friends, but there are days during this bright and shining and perhaps deadly winter when I think it might be just around the corner.

Mankind needs every ally he can find down to and including earthworms.

Perhaps more from earthworms than a lot of other items.

Which is why I look with some trepidation on a contest currently being conducted by Worms International, a San Francisco based firm with headquarters on Pier 24 off the Embarcadero.

A laddie doesn't eat his allies, does he? Yet that is the fate Worms International proposes for some of its progeny, a species of earthworm so virile and active they would make Chubby Checker forget about the days of the twist and the Peppermint lounge.

Bette Simmons, vice president of Worms International, is proud of her contest "Worms are a fine source of protein," she assured me.

So Worms International is sponsoring a cooking contest with worms as the prime ingredient of the dishes offered.

The firm is not fooling around. It has offered a first prize of $500 for the person who devises the outstanding culinary work of art featuring earthworms.

Folks have suggested the little squirmers be used in cakes, cookies, breads, casseroles or baked, crumbled and sprinkled on salads, potatos and soup in the manner some folks use bacon.

Well, what the hell, people eat rattlesnakes, don't they? The cooking contest is, I suspect, a publicity gimmick conceived in Bette's agile mind. She is, believe me, one of the most earthworm conscious lasses I have ever encountered.

Bette lived in Pleasanton back in the days of yore. Her mother was Arabelle Dabovich, a well known local horsewoman who once raced a mare named Queenie on the Pleasanton race track at the fairgrounds.

"It's just like coming home again," she said while we settled down to lunch at the Pleasanton Hotel.

She might have been glad to be home, but she talked about earthworms.

Listen to Bette and earthworms may well be the saviors of the world, if they are not already.

Particularly Super Worms, the kind produced by Worms International and its growers.

There are a pair of Worms International farms in the valley, one belonging to Pete Bailey in Pleasanton and another to trucker Robert Blow in Livermore.

They get five bucks a pound for their product which adds up to about a mill more than a penny a worm.

Primarily Super Worms are used for agricultural purposes in combination with the Greenbelt drip irrigation system and a giant mulcher produced by Hy Hunter Industries in Granada, California.

The worms serve several purposes for the agricultural world. Used in combination with the giant mulcher they eat its product with gusto, produce their own weight in castings each 24 hours and eventually convert the mulch into one giant pile of organic fertilizer marketed by Bette and her pals as, you guessed it, Wormalizer.

Turned loose in a field with the underpround Greenbelt irrigation system they not only aerate the soil but drop enough castings to provide fertilizer.

Fields using the Worms International system are said not to use or need any chemical fertilizers while increasing production. One test ten acre orange grove in Southern California doubled its output using the system while cutting both water bill and fertilizer. Matter of fact the fertilizer bill was zilch after the initial outlay for worms.

Super Worm is actually a souped up version of the California Golden Giant, a true earthworm which is somewhat smaller than night crawlers and larger than the common red worm used by fishermen.

Super Worms are fed a special diet which consists of dead matter and are so strong and active they would make a jitterbug look like a wall flower.

They eat only dead organic matter, thus never disturb the root structure of plants where they live and unlike night crawlers or red worms are not inclined to migrate.

The drip irrigation system with which they are usually combined keeps soil constantly at the right moisture content and has saved growers up to 90 percent of the water cost used by a sprinkling system.

All of which makes me wonder why anyone would want to eat the little perishers.

But as I say, we eat rattlesnakes. don't we? And escargot.

So slip me some snails, Henri. They'll be a perfect hors d'oevres before I down this Super Worm sandwich.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Once in a while some nasty opponent interferes with your Blackwood call by bidding over it.

There are lots of ways to handle this sort of interference. The one we like to use is to double to show no aces, pass to show one ace and bid to show more.

What do you do if your opponent interferes at such a high level that you have to bid seven if you bid at all? In this case you simply double to say: "Partner, I don't think we can make seven". Pass to say: "Partner, I think we can make seven." Of course, if you are sure you can make seven you go ahead and bid it.

West's three-club bid was one of those nonvulnerable bids that some players try on occasion. North's Blackwood four notrump was a slight overbid, but he liked his distribution. East's seven-club call put a lot of pressure on South but South was ready.

South studied his hand carefully. His heart suit was good. He had both minor suit aces and the queen of spades. It was just unthinkable for North to be Blackwooding without ace-king of spades and ace of hearts so South bid the lay down grand slam.

Ask the Jacobys

A Wisconsin reader wants to know what he should bid with: ♠ A ♥ x x ♦ K Q J 8 5 2 ♣ x x x x after his right hand opponent opened one diamond.

The answer is that he should pass. A double would be for takeout, a two-diamond call would be a cue bid of sorts and a three-diamond bid might be really hurt.

Meet the press Chuck, quickly

Mike Zampa

Someone asked Chuck Tanner yesterday if he feared for Charles Finley's spiritual future in the light of fateful revelations made by Alvin Dark some months back.

The handsome Tanner, dressed in gray, hair flecked with the color around the ears, assayed reporters assembled at Edgewater Hyatt House to meet the new Oakland A's manager.

"There's only one man who will be the judge of us, of all of us in this room," Tanner said.

Right Chuck. We all know about Finley's pervasive power. But the man was asking about God.

Well before Tanner could amplify, Finley himself stepped to the microphone. "I hope the Lord takes a liking to all of you," Charlie smiled; "but not too soon. Now, shall we sing."

Charles Finley

The scene was typical of so many Finley productions in the past. The consumate showman had upstaged Tanner, billed as featured attraction.

Later, while a lone news camera whirred in the corner of a banquet room, the recently fired pilot of the Chicago White Sox was grilled by a television reporter.

At the other end of the hall, Finley held court for a battery of media types. You can say what you want about the colorful, outspoken A's, but they come by their garrulousness naturally, from massah Finley.

In Chuck Tanner's first big confrontation with the Bay Area press, he got 15 minutes to reaffirm his delight at signing a three-year contract (the longest of any A's manager under Finley) and getting the chance to manipulate the three-time world champs.

Then the boss took over.

Yes, he said, he was serious about attempting to sign a professional jockey as a second basemen. No, he wouldn't object to major league expansion, in the proper cities. Yes, he is confident that Catfish Hunter will be back in A's uniform by opening day, and no, he couldn't comment on the possible Giants' franchise shift, or the downfall of the reserve clause because they were matters in litigation and of course everyone would understand his reluctance to talk.

Charlie also said if he loses 10 pounds he may join the pitchers at spring training "That's the only spot on the field we are concerned with," Finley said.

And while he spoke, Charlie palmed his favorite toy, that alert-orange baseball he's been harping at the American League to accept. He brought two dozen to Tanner's press conference confirming the fact this was still the owner's soapbox and the manager could only share it for a moment.

"Batting averages will go up over night if we use this baseball," he said. An aid passed out the creations, which looked more like luscious scoops of sherbet. Reporters climbed all over each other to grap a souvenir. Someone suggested talking to Tanner before he was given his release, like so many other Flnley hirelings.

While people danced around Charlie like string puppets, he was asked about Bill Veeck, the man who purchased the White Sox, and freed Tanner for the A's. Will he pose a threat to Finley's reign as master showman of baseball.

The answer seemed obvious from the way he commanded yesterday's gathering. The A's owner answered anyway.

"I'm glad Bill Veeck is back in baseball," he said. "It needs all the color it can get. I just want to kick the bleep out of Veeck on the field."

To reach his goals, Finley says he is in the market for another pitcher. He won't reveal whether or not he'll seek Andy Messersmith who has beaten baseball's reserve clause to become a free agent.

He did say he released two veterans who helped Oakland to a divisional title last year, Sonny Siebert and Tommy Harper.

But how about Chuck Tanner, the man who retooled the White Sox and befriended the sensitive Dick Allen? What does he have to say about his new ball club and his superstar employer?

"The A's have the best talent in all of baseball," he said. "There's so much talent and versatility, and it's still a young ball club, so that they're capable of coming back and winning the whole thing. We have the legs and we have the arms," Tanner said. "We're going to continue to win and be aggressive."

How about working for Charles O.?

"Mr. Finley wanted me, and I wanted to work for him," Tanner said. "When we're losing, I'll let Charlie run the team. When we're winning, I'll take credit."

How about the rambunctious, volatile A's players?

"I know a lot of guys who hit .180 and never caused trouble at all."

What about job tenure in Oakland?

"I expect to be here a long time," Chuck smiled. As he can remember who's the judge of us all.

Foreman at crossroads

During training for the Ron Lyle fight tomorrow in Las Vegas, Gil Clancy's chief admonition to George Foreman has been; "Be a boxer."

In his 27 years George Foreman has been many things, from a teenage ghetto thug in Houston to heavyweight champion of the world. But not a boxer.

A terrific puncher? Yes. A well-conditioned athlete? Almost always. But a boxer? Not really.

It certainly wasn't an astute ring practitioner who was stunned by Muhammad Ali in Zaire 16 months ago. And if Foreman earns a second shot at Ali, it's going to take all the skills Clancy can impart in the upcoming months.

Which makes tomorrow's fight at Caeser's Palace doubly important to Foreman. It is George's first comeback bout since dropping the heavyweight championship on an eighth-round knockout. He must defeat Lyle to again be established as a leading figure in the division.

He must also display the polish and skill that Clancy has attempted to bring in two months of training.

At times Foreman has looked uncomfortable with the teachings of his new manager.Clancy has shortened his punches, emphasized Foreman's jab, drilled the former champ at putting combinations together.

In early training Foreman looked clumsy, vulnerable and frustrated. Sometimes he would revert to his old slugging style, sending punches via Western Union.

Beginning wlth the Lyle bout, however, George will attempt to harness the subtle skills.

His left jab is deadly, Clancy says. It will be the key weapon against Lyle, though Foreman has also developed a sneaky right-hand lead that could stop the scheduled 12-rounder in an instant.

Foreman says he must be weary of Lyle's hook, and his 33 years of experience.

The fight will be screened via ABC television at 4:30 tomorrow on a tape-delay basis. It will originate from the 4,000 seat Caeser's Palace Arena, where Foreman has spent the past 10 days.

Weigh-in for the bout is today, and shortly after that, Foreman will be sequestered in his hotel room until fight time. All of Clancy's fighters, from Jerry Quarry to Emile Griffith, have traditionally been isolated on the eve of battle.

It will be an anxious wait for Foreman...perhaps a frustrating one. Though he says his only desire is to get back into the ring, to fight all of the top contenders, ultimately he wants Ali again. This is but an intermediary step, albeit a necessary one Foreman can't take it lightly, but at the same time he can't divorce his thoughts from the championship he once held, or the hope of retaining it.

For Lyle, it is his last bid to regain stature, and perhaps another crack at the title. Though Foreman is six years younger, he could be facing a similar situation.

It is an important fight.

Granada wrestlers roll over Amador

The banner up above the Granada rooting section read "If you want to win em, you've got to pin them." For Granada at least, no better words could have been spoken, winning all but two of its matches on pins. The Matadors came from behind to beat hosting Amador, 36-33 last night in an EBAL showdown.

Granada's other two wins were six-pointers also, one a forfeit for the Mats' Brett Nadeau at the 114-pound class and the other on a call which has put the entire match under protest.

The opening match at 95-pounds between Felix Lopez of Granada and Steve Potts of the Dons was called in the third round when the referees called an illegal hold on Potts and Lopez was unable to continue the match. The referee then gave six points to Lopez.

Whatever the outcome of the protest, fans who did attend the match were treated to a real donnybrook. After the protest match Granada jumped out in front 18-0, benefiting from a forfeit at 114-pounds and Roy Davis' pin in the 105-pound class with 1.56 gone in the first round.

But Amador turned it right around, winning the next six matches.

AV, Gaels seek lead

The inside track to the EBAL soccer crown and recognition as one of the Bay Area's top high school teams awaits the winner of today's match between Dublin and Amador on the Gaels' field.

Amador has a 9-1 record in EBAL play and Dublin is 8-1-1. With only three games left after today's competition the winner of this contest would be a near shoe-in for the championshp.

On top of that, the EBAL is generally considered to be one of the toughest prep leagues in the entire Bay Area so the league title takes on even more importance.

"I feel the EBAL is the toughest league in the Bay Area," said Amador mentor Mike Geib yesterday "Only the San Francisco league and possibly some of the Pennisula and San Jose leagues can compare with it."

The toughness of the EBAL aside, Geib is happy his club is in the position its in today.

"We are a very young team with just three seniors in the starting line-up," Geib noted. "At the start of the season most people had us picked for about fourth. I felt we could finish about third."

"We are much quicker than last year, no question about that," he said "Also we've had a lot of great efforts from our players."

Among the top Don players are sophomore forward Pat Cohan and senior Casey Clark.

"Cohan has shown a lot of hustle this year and Clark has scored two key goals in our last two victories," Geib stated. "They have really been a factor this year."

Geib also credits the Pleasanton youth soccer program for the Dons' success.

"It (the youth program) has really been a big help to us," he said. "It's an outstanding program as teams from the league area always do well in outside competition."

SR, Pokes tangle

Two EBAL title challengers meet in a key early season basketball game tonight while league leader Amador Valley faces a threat from its cross-freeway rival Dublin.

With a week's vacation to prepare, surprise contender San Ramon travels to Livermore this evening at 8 p.m. Both clubs are 3-1, one game behind the undefeated Dons.

After thrashing Dublin, 61-44 in its pre-season tournament, Amador is expected to boost its perfect record tonight which means San Ramon and Livermore both need a victory to remain close.

Even more desperate is one-time title favorite Granada, already two games down in the standings, and facing Monte Vista on the road tonight. If the injury-hampered Matadors lose again, championship hopes may go up in smoke.

In their first varsity basketball matchup, California will be playing at Foothill this evening.

San Ramon is one of the league's surprise teams to date. True, the Wolves have faced second division teams, but they've played without 6-2 forward Jeff Hermann and still survived. With him back, to join good shooters like Jim Hogeboom and Brad Blake, San Ramon will be strong offensively.

It's problem will be defensing Livermore's Ted Wood. The All-EBAL guard is playing tremendous basketball

San Ramon may have to concede Wood his points, and concentrate on the other Cowboys.

Dublin must contend with an Amador offense that may be more diversified than any in the past three seasons. Guards Steve Mohatt and Mike Hill are excellent outside shooters. Center Rob Yackley is coming around under the bucket, and he too displayed an outside touch in Amador's last game.

CITY OF PLEASANTON
NOTICE OF INTENT TO FILE A NEGATIVE DECLARATION
PROJECT DESIGNATION: RZ-76-2
January 23, 1976

In accordance with the provisions set forth in Resolution No. 74-133 and as amended in Resolution No. 75-22 (Environmental Impact Guidelines and Procedures), rezoning application RZ-76-2 has been determined to require a negative declaration.

The project consists of rezoning the site bounded by Stoneridge Drive, Stonedale Drive, Gold Creek and Interstate Freeway # 680 from PUD (Planned Unit Development) District to R-1-6500 (Single Family Residential) District. The approximately 22.7 acres would be developed to yield 87 lots with an average size of 8,800 square feet and a minimum lot size of 6,500 square feet.

The existing PUD zoning and PUD plan would allow 141 residential units on the site. This rezoning would decrease the overall density of the site. An environmental assessment is to be required prior to the submittal of a tentative tract map for this parcel of land which will address itself to the specific potential impacts of the proposed land use. Rezoning this vacant but graded and unused site from one residential classification to another would yield a less dense land use and would not create, to a significant degree, any of the effects enumerated in the Environmental Impact Guidelines and Procedures, which indicate that the environment may be harmed.

For more information on this case, contact the Department of Housing and Community Development, 200 Bernal Avenue, Pleasanton, California 94566, Telephone 846-3202.

Unless any written appeals of this case are received by this department within ten (10) days of the above date or publication of this notice in the Pleasanton Times, whichever is later, this decision will become effective.

Community Development

Beef, Bacon and Cheese. We took 3 great tastes off a bun and put them in a bag.

The Bacon Cheeseburger is going to the dogs. Thanks to Purina's new Beef, Bacon & Cheese Flavor Dog Chow.

This dog-delighting dish has got 3 different tastes – and 3 different nuggets.

The hearty red nugget is made with real beef meal. The curly brown nugget with the flavor of bacon. And the golden yellow nugget with real dried cheese.

We think of it as fast food for dogs, because dogs will eat it fast.

And to get your juices started, there's a 25¢ coupon placed conspicuously on this page.

EVERY CITIZEN ENTITLED

You Can Get up to $100,000 in Free U.S. Gov't. Benefits

WASHINGTON, D.C. (Special)- Now, for the first time in history, the American public is being offered a newly compiled and complete government information guidebook that clearly informs every citizen of the thousands of little known free benefits you are entitled to. It further points out how you can quickly take advantage of them.

The new informative easy-to-understand guidebook is appropriately entitled, "How To Get $100,000 Worth Of Services Free, Each Year, From The U.S. Government."

Unlimited Opportunities

Listed throughout the guidebook are thousands of valuable, yet little known and unused free government services, aids and benefits available for everyone, covering almost every subject under the sun whether business, personal, health or pleasure. You can get special government loans and outright free grants of money. Discover where and how to buy thousands of government surplus items at a small fraction of their original cost. Enjoy these benefits and thousands more.

Benefit Immediately

The guidebook plainly shows you what is offered by the government and how you can go directly to the "right source" to get the easiest and fastest results so you can immediately benefit (and profit) with free government help.

Book Now Available

To get a copy of this highly informative government information book send $10.00 cash, check, or M.O. to: Government Information Service, Dept.C2 ,4816 MacArthur Blvd., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20007.

LET STATE FARM HELP PROTECT YOUR FINANCIAL FUTURE

If you have a lot or plan to have a lot, you have a lot to lose if hit with a big lawsuit. State Farm's Success Protector policy gives you $1,000,000 of extra liability coverage. Plus, it provides an extra $100,000 of medical payments coverage. So your assets are also protected in the event of a serious illness or accident. The cost? Far less than you'd expect to pay for this much protection. Call me for all the details.

CARS FOR 1976

Bobcat emphasizes economy, styling

Bobcat, Lincoln-Mercury's fuel-efficient subcompact, combines Mercury styling, luxury and quality with the economy, convenient size and driveability of a small car.

Improved fuel economy and several exciting new options will make the 1976 Bobcat even more economical ad fun to drive.

See the Bobcat and other fine Lincoln-Mercury cars at FREMONT LINCOLN - MERCURY, 36761 Fremont Blvd., Fremont.

"When Bobcat was introduced in March, it gave us the car we needed to compete in the domestic subcompact market," said Walter S. Walla, Ford Motor Company vice president and division general manager. "Recent demand for the car has been encouraging, and with the latest improvements, the 1976 model should be an even better value."

Bobcat is offered in two models — the three door Runabout and a Villager station wagon. A fuel-thrifty powerteam including the 2300cc engine and four-speed manual transmission is standard equipment in both cars.

Both models have a distinctive vertical grille and domed hood identifying them as member of the Lincoln-Mercury family of fine cars.

Bobcat has a new standard equipment level for 1976 which features high-back bucket spats, revised door-trim panels and regular seat belts. Deluxe low-back bucket seats, door trim and seat belts have been made optional.

For 1976, Runabout has a new optional simulated-woodgrain applique for side and lower-back panels, giving the car a sporty, contemporary look. A new colorful Alpine-clad cloth interior trim in four colors replaces Polyknit cloth as an option on both models.

Other new options include Am/stereo tape radio, interval-select windshieldwipers, a sports-vinyl roof with optional sports-tape stripes, and an engine-block heater.

jstandard features such as rack-and-pinion steering, solid-state ignition, sound-insulatpd unitized-body construction and electrocoat primer give Bobcat buyers increased value for their dollar.

A 2800-cc V6 engine, automatic transmission and power steering are major options.

Pinto Pony offers economy

Ford's Pinto Pony, sticker-priced at $2,895, offers buyers wn estimated 32 mpg highway driving and 22 mpg city driving fuel economy.

William P. Benton, Ford Motor Company vice president and Ford Division general manager, said "The new model currently is being built in our San Jose assembly plant for Californians and will be Fords price and fuel-economy leader there for 1976."

An American eagle design from an antique coverlet is the source of the pattern for a new bicentennial year seat trim developed for three Chevrolet cars by a trio of women designers at General Motors' design studios. (Left to right) Suzanne Vanderbilt, Barbara Munger and Jan Tribbey teamed up to design the seat fabric which will be available for the Chevette, Vega and Monza soon.

Corvette:

New touches to an old favorite

Chevrolet's one-of-a-kind Corvette sports car boasts new power train developments, improved body structure and styling refinements for 1976.

Key Corvette advances are a new lighter weight automatic transmission for the standard engine, a carburetor air induction system for improved driveability and quietness, and a partial steel underbody replacing fiberglass.

The 1976 Corvette will be offered exclusively in the Stingray model. The convertible model is discontinued with the increasing consumer preference for the coupe and its removable panels.

The standard and optional performance 5.7 liter, 350 cubic inch V8 engines with four-barrel carburetor are continued for 1976. They can be teamed with either four-speed manual or three-speed automatic transmissions.

The "400" Turbo Hydra-matic transmission is replaced with the "350" transmission for the standard engine Chevrolet tests have shown the new unit provides responsive shifting at wide open throttle while down-shift capability is improved and noise level reduced. With this new transmission, vehicle weight is reduced approximately ten pounds. This is an extra plus since fuel economy should improve with the new torque converter design better matched to engine output.

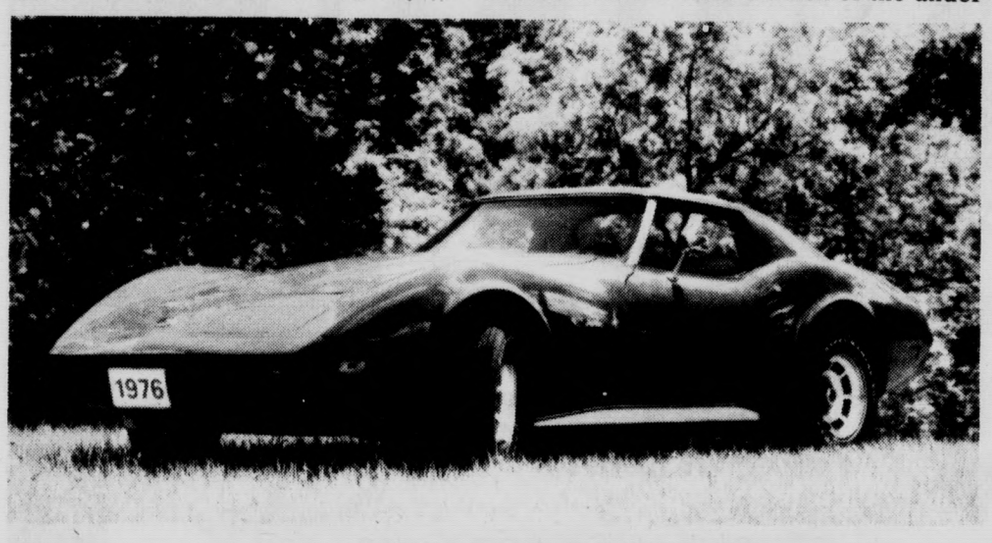
The Turbo Hydra-matic 400 transmission is continued with the optional engine, but with the torque converter revised to be more compatible with engine output.

The new carburetor air induction system replaces the 1975 system of ducting engine compartment air and outside air from the rear of the hood only at wide open throttle. In the 1976 system, an "over-the-radiator" duct takes in outside air at all throttle positions and a temperature control valve diverts or mixed outside air with mainfold heated air Benefits are improved driveability, better cold weather operation and less noise.

Replacing Corvette's fiberglass with steel in a new front section of the underbody improves body structure and provides compartment heat to the present iillar support panel that is bonded to a fiberglass rear section with a molded-in closing panel.

Other 1976 Corvette developments are:

- New one-piece bar Corvette nameplate on the rear between the taillights.
- Ten exterior colors with eight being exclusive to the Corvette and an increase of optional interior leather trim choices from five to seven colors
- A new four-spoke sports steering wheel smaller in diameter than the former one.
- New cast aluminum wheel and standard steel spare wheel option that helps to reduce car weight still further.



New Chevys economical

WASHINGTON — Chevrolet has introduced its 1976 cars and described them as the "most fuel efficient cars in many years."

Robert D. Lund, Chevrolet general manager and General Motors vice president, said the 1976 cars highlighted by the new Chevette, represent a major commitment by the automaker toward meeting the national energy goals.

"With two new engines and lighter vehicles, Chevrolet has committed its recources to meeting our national goals and has made what we believe is the most important progress in the industry to date and in record time," he declared.

For 1976, Chevrolet will offer 45 models — one fewer than last year — in nine distinct lines.

Lund said the industry sales leader will show approximately a nine per cent sales weighted passenger car improvement in fuel consumption over 1975. The gain comes from the improved efficiency of the division's engines, the introduciton of the Chevette, and a new 305 cubic inch V-8 engine for Camaro, Nova, Chevelle and Monte Carlo.

All this improvement comes on top of a 25 per cent sales weighted fuel economy gain in 1975, or an average gain of 38 per cent over 1974 models.

Reviewing the 1976 lineup for newsmen here, Lund said, "With our optimistic outlook for 1976, we see a major trend for Chevrolet in the near future. The new Chevette is the turning point for our industry in this decade. For the first time in our history, fifty per cent of our sales will be small cars — Camaro, Nova, Monza, Veoa and Chevette.

"We expect our passenger car volume to recover to a level of 2,295,000 units. Chevrolet hopes to increase its share of the total U.S. market from 21.1 per cent in 1975 to 22.9 per cent in the 1976 model year.

Two Japanese models

New Opels go on sale April 1

FLINT, Mich. — Buick Motor Division has announced that the Japanese-built Opel by Isuzu will go on sale in selected Buick dealerships throughout the United States on April 1, 1976.

David C. Collier, general manager of Buick and vice president of General Motors, said the German-built Opel line, which Buick dealers have been marketing since 1964, will be phased out with the 1975 models, of which approximately 5,000 are still in dealer hands.

The new 1976 Japanese Opel will go to market in this country in one body style, a two-door coupe which will be available in two versions, a standard and a deluxe model.

First shipments are scheduled to arrive in U.S. ports sometime this month.

Collier said Buick-Opel dealers would continue to provide parts and service for all German Opels in service and Buick would honor all warranty claims.

Standard features of the Japanese Opel include a 1.8 - litre engine with a four-speed manual transmission. The basic engine, designed and produced in Japan, will be an L-4 with an overhead camshaft and two barrel carburetion.

The car has been certified for both federal and California emission standards, and has been given an EPA fuel economy rating of 23 miles per gallon in the city and 36 miles on the highway, with manual transmission.

Body dimensions of the car are about the same as the German Opel 1900.

Other standard features include fully reclining vinyl bucket seats, power brakes with Front discs, tinted glass windows, swing-out quarter windows, flow-through ventilation, rack and pinion steering, locking glove box and door-operated dome and courtesy light.

Factory installed options include automatic transmission, air-conditioning, AM-FM radio, radial tires and electric rear window defogger.

An interior decor option includes a console, tachometer, woodgrain moldings and trim and carpeting.

The exterior dress-up package includes wheel trim rings, window, side and rocker moldings, along with bumper guards.

The car comes in six exterior colors and three interior trims.

California emission equipment includes the catalytic converter.

Initially, some 800 Buick dealers will carry the new Opel, Collier said, and these dealers will be located, for the most part, in those markets where there is a strong potential for imports.

Isuzu, which is the oldest automotive maker in Japan, started in 1916 and during its early days was known primarily as a truck manufacturer. In the early 1950's, it added Passenger cars to the line.

In 1961, a new plant was built near Tokyo for the production of light trucks and passenger cars.

Since 1971, General Motors has held a 34.2 per cent interest in the Isuzu firm. However, importation of the 1976 cars marks the first time that these Japanese-built passenger vehicles have been marketed in this country through the General Motors organization.

Camaro in tenth year

Camaro moves into its tenth year as America's favorite small sporty car with a new small black V8, improved braking and a dressy Rally Sport option.

The 1976 Camaro is offered in two distinct models. The standard sport coupe offers added luxury touches.

For the sporty look the Rally Sport option offers low gloss black paint treatment on hood, header panel, grille, headlight bezels, upper fender surfaces, the forward portion of the roof, rear end panel and rocker panel. Rounding out the scheme are black side and rear Rally Sport decals with tri - colored striping separating the black - accented areas from the basic body color.

A major mechanical advancement for 1976 is a new short block, smaller displacement, 5 liter, 305 cubic inch V8, replacing the 350 V8 as standard power plant on the Type LT coupe and on the sport coupe model. Standard engine for the regular coupe again is the 250-cubic inch six-cylinder. An optional four-barrel, 5 7 litre (350) is also available for both models.

The new, smaller V8 is ten pounds lighter than the 350 V8 while using the same relatively long stroke.

VW Scirocco

Larger engine adds to driving enjoyment

Volkswagen's Scirocco, a luxurious, aerodynamic 2-plus-2 hatchback, is even more fun to drive thanks to a larger displacement engine.

View the Scirocco, Rabbit and other economy Volkswagens at HUMPHREY MOTORS, 750 A St., Hayward and at MEZZETTI VOLKSWAGEN, 38555 Fremont Blvd., Fremont.

The new 1.6 liter overhead cam powerplant — up from 1.5 liters last year — improves torque at the lower end of the rev scale for more smoothness and adds one horsepower at the top end.

In addition, the 1976 Scirocco benefits from a smaller turning circle, a more positive reverse gear lockout in the shift linkage, an improved ventilation system and front seats whose height and back rests are adjustable for a comfortable driving position.

Among the car's unique features is a single windshield wiper blade mounted near the center-line of the car. This feature, seen on some race cars and on VW's Experimental Safety Vehicle (ESVW 1), provides a wide, fast sweep with its two-speed electric motor. In addition, the Scirocco wiper has an "intermittent" mode, which sweeps every seven seconds or so — a useful feature in fog and light drizzle.

The Scirocco's body was designed by Giorgette Giugiaro of the ItalDesign Studio in Turin, Italy. Its contours were further shaped and refined in VW's wind tunnel — the largest in Europe. The result is a car that slips through the wind at up to 100 mph in track tests.

In these days of expensive fuel, even sports car drivers have to watch their pennies. The Scirocco helps. In Environmental Protection Agency dynamometer testing, the four-speed version delivered 39 mpg in highway tests and 25 mpg in the city cycle. This from a machine also capable of turning 11-second zero to 60 times.

The Scirocco saves in other ways too. Routine maintenance is called for only every 15,000 miles. And the engine compartment, equipped with a socket for VW's Computer Analysis service check system, is laid out in a "service friendly" manner. Plugs, points, oil filter and other components are easy to get at.

The engine and the transmission are mounted transversely over the front driving wheels to reduce the car's overall length and to give better traction. A four-speed full-synchro box is standard, and an automatic (also mounted transversely — an industry first) is available. The manual version now has a permanent oil fill.

Produced in limited numbers by Karmann. a German firm that has been building custom bodies since the days of the horse-drawn carriage, the Scirocco has an interior that reflects its sporty personality. The instrument panel and standard equipment console carry a full complement of gauges, including a tachometer, resettable trip odometer and voltmeter. The upholstery on the seats is highlighted by bright tartan fabric with contrasting leatherette. A sports steering wheel, districtive light alloy rims and radial tires are standard.

A heated rear window defogger is standard as is a wide, tall hatchback opening that converts the sportster into a miniwagon when the rear seat is folded. Luggage is concealed by a hinged panel in normal use.

Rack and pinion steering is standard this year, with a new ratio that makes the car easier to steer. The front suspension geometry and dual diagonal braking system are designed to help keep the car tracking straight in the event of a front tire blowout or the malfunction of one brake circuit.

The rear suspension makes use of a rear axle design originated by VW. It consists of a transverse T-bar to which are attached trailing arms that support the wheels. When one wheel hits a bump, the T-bar twists, resisting further individual wheel movement; The harder the twist, the more the axle resists. The result is an axle that combines all the tracking advantages of a live axle yet reduces weight and provides individual wheel control.

Safety was designed into the Scirocco Front and rear sections have energy management elements that help control forces in impacts while the cockpit is designed as a rigid capsule. The fuel tank is mounted in a protected position ahead of the rear axle and spare tire.

Like the rest of the 1976 VW line, the Scirocco is covered by VW's Owner Security Blanket program which includes a limited 12 month, 20,000-mile warranty.

The 1976 VW Scirocco hatchback coupe delivers more power and still achieves 39 miles per gallon highway mileage.

Smaller cars gaining favor

By Owen Ullmann

DETROIT (AP) — The American driving public, which grew up behind the wheel of a roomy full-size family auto, is now purchasing four-passenger cars over the big models by nearlv a 2-1 margin.

Last year, 2.8 million persons bought subcompact cars or minicars — vehicles no bigger than a Ford Pinto or Chevrolet Vega. That represents about a third of all the new cars sold in this country, including imports, during 1975.

By contrast, just under 1.5 million persons bought standard six-passenger cars: Chevrolets, Fords, plymouths. Buicks and other models of similar size which once were the backbone of the U.S. auto industry.

The meteoric growth of little cars is all the more remarkable considering Detroit didn't even build an auto to seat four or fewer persons until 1969, when the first of the subcompacts went on sale.

Now the American companies are rushing smaller-than-subcompact cars, called minicars, onto the market to meet a burgeoning demand for low prices and high gasoline mileage. Minicar sales belonged exclusively to imports until General Motors introduced its Chevrolet Chevette last fall. The minicar sales jumped 40 per cent from 1974, to 711,000 last year, while over-all sales declined 9 per cent.

New 4-wheel drive van now at Crown Chevrolet in Dublin.

Crown first major dealer for new vans

LIVERMORE — Mike Whitton, who heads Pathfinder Equipment Co. located near Los Angeles, will visit Crown Chevrolet tomorrow to formally announce Crown's appointment as Northern California's first major dealer for the new 4-wheel drive Chevy vans.

Whitton will arrive in Pathfinder's prototype model used in national publicities and featured in several magazine articles. He will leave the K-Van with Crown, to be followed by a complete inventory.

The already-famous K-Van is manufactured by Pathfinder directly from a special pool arranged by General Motors. The Pathfinder 4 WD conversion carries a warranty identical to GM's on the original equipment and is honored at all Chevy dealers in the U.S., Canada and Mexico. This makes K-Van the first official vehicle of its class.

Pathfinder builds 4-WD conversions on Chevy van chassis of 110- and 125-inch wheelbase lengths. The front axle is a Dana 44 unit with disc brakes and Dana-Spicer locking hubs. A new Process 205 transfer case is mounted at the rear of the Pathfinder subframe.

For considerations of relocating some steering linkage, one Saginaw steering gearbox is substituted for another to properly position the pitman shaft and avoid binding. A Heco steering damper is bolted from subframe to main steering ink.

If the prospective buyer is looking for a broad range of utility, and go-anywhere capability, the 4-WD K-Van is definitely a possibility. Advantages far outweigh disadvantages, if one chooses to use the K-Van to haul everything anywhere.

Cadillac sales the best ever

New year shows volume brisk

Cadillac Motor Car Division wound up 1975 with a third consecutive quarterly sales record as fourth quarter sales were the best of any quarter ever, including a record December, according to Edward C. Kennard, general manager of the division and vice president of General Motors.

On the local level, according to S. R. Barone, zone manager. "The San Francisco zone showed a 27.4 per cent increase over 1974 sales figures, and January sales seem to be starting off exceptionally strong."

LEW DOTY CADILLAC, 22196 Mission Blvd., Hayward, has a full display of all Cadillac models, as well as fine used automobiles.

"Domestic deliveries of 218,291 in the April-December period exceeded the $15.560 former nine month record set in the same period in 1973," Mr. Kennard said.

In addition. fourth quarter sales of 83,574 resulted in a new all time quarterly record, surpassing the fourth quarter of 1973 whec Cadillac dealers set the former record, 82,500."

He continued "December sales of 25,675 set a new Deceber record by more than six per cent, erasing the former December record of 24,046 in 1972."

"These impressive records and many more throughout the year contributed to an outstanding sales year for Cadillac," Mr. Kennard said. "Calendar year 1975 domestic deliveries of 267,049 were 19.3 per cent over the 223,844 deliveries in 1974."

He said. "The outstanding sales performance of Cadillac dealers dealers in 1975 was sparked by the May introduction of the Division's internationally sized Seville and was made possible by the continued customer acceptance of the total model lineup — all affording our customers with Cadillac's traditional quality, economy and value."

Honda now in fourth

American Honda Motor Co., Inc., Gardena, Calif., has reported December sales of Honda Civic automobiles in the United States at 6,319, pushing total sales for the year over the 100,000-mark and finalizing the company's hold on fourth place among all imported cars sold in this country in 1975.

The 1975 sales total of 102,389 represented a 137 per cent increase over the 43,119 sold in the U.S. in 1974. This rate of sales increase was well above that of any other make of car, domestic or imported, according to Cliff Schmillen.

SMALL PICKUPS BEWARE!

THE NEW INTERNATIONAL SCOUT TERRA IS HERE!

THERE'S NOT ANOTHER PICKUP LIKE IT!

It's no mini. The Terra is the new right-sized pickup that handles a ton of anything.

And rides smooth. With selective four-wheel drive and a wheelbase as big as any full-size pickups — 118".

The lockable, in-cab storage space is the biggest you'll find standard — 11 cubic feet.

Yet the Terra is narrower and shorter than full-size pickups. So it'll take you places no other four-wheel drive pickup can.

Come in and compare the new International Scout Terra with any other pickup on the market.

There's no comparison. It's the only four wheel drive, intermediate-size pickup you can buy.
